The program needs to be continued. And that's why I've introduced H. R. 4107, which we will consider today. Let me take a brief moment to describe the bill which will allow us to continue to address these most pressing needs. The legislation reauthorizes the Fire Grant Program for three years at its current authorized level of 900 million per year. It mandates the peer-review process that has been such a critical component of the program's success. Firefighters and firefighting experts developed the criteria under which the applications are judged, and they make the key decisions as to who gets the positive nod on which projects are funded. It calls on the USFA to administer the program, which is the right agency with a track record of success in working with the fire services. It increases the maximum allowable grant and decreases the matching requirement for larger departments. And the mayor is going to appreciate that. So often we pass programs in Washington and say we'll give you so much money if the local jurisdiction will come up with the additional money, and so often the local jurisdiction is strapped and doesn't have the resources to come up with additional money. So we're decreasing the matching requirements. The program is needed, and I'm confident that it will be reauthorized before the end of the fiscal year. And that's why we're having...
